Chamber had a strong year through member value pillars

By JASON DITTMANN
Chair, Regina & District Chamber of Commerce

When the Board sat down in early 2023 to review the Regina and District Chamber of Commerce strategic plan, the areas of focus were clear and became the pillars of our organization's success.

Member Value

When we look in retrospect at events like the Mayor's Breakfast held in early December, signature evenings and other networking events, the high level of energy we have seen at those events tells me that the Chamber pillar of member value is strong.

Advocacy

There are many conversations, meetings and ideas being shared that aren't always in the public eye. Your Chamber leadership is making connections and building relationships to ensure that our voice is not only heard but policy is being built around what our membership needs.

Engagement

Tony Playter, his team and the board have set out to connect with many industry and business leaders to share what we feel are important and relevant information and perspectives so you, our members have pieces of the information you need to guide your decisions.

Thank you to our members for a tremendous 2023. The engagement we have had from you, and the participation in our events have been outstanding. We certainly have more work to do, however, this has been a tremendous year.

As my term as board chair sunsets, I know our new board leaders Kyle Addison and Wura Dasyuva, along with Tony and the Chamber staff, will continue executing on our strategic pillars to "To be among Canada's most respected, influential and innovative business organizations."

Thank you and have a successful 2024!

Survey to collect data on sustainability programs

The Canadian Standards Association Group (CSA) has released a guidance document to help associations understand and meet the needs of their members regarding sustainability.

Trace Associates Inc., in partnership with multiple associations, is conducting research to help associations better understand the needs of their members, and to provide a record of current participation by members in sustainability programs.

The Regina & District Chamber of Commerce is participating in the research, and we encourage our members to complete the two-minute multiple choice survey.

The opinions of our members are valued and will assist CSA to serve you better.
